"Culture Change in Practice" is our own weblog where people can become involved in a conversation about Culture Change as it is practiced by professionals in real nursing homes. Feel free to join the conversation, or post a comment about something you have learned on your journey.

Our friends at Huntersville Oaks in Charlotte, NC have recently crossed that line into the "after" - that is after culture change, after institution and after lots of hard work. Their move into new households has drawn local media attention. I'm pointing out this article from Charlotte Medical News <http://charlotte.medicalnewsinc.com/news.php?viewStory=485> because they do a really nice job of showing the difference between before and after and highlight some great improvements in person-centered care. Congrats to residents and staff at Huntersville Oaks!
